Periodical Information available through DeVry's Library System

If you visit <http://library.kc.devry.edu/company.html> you will be able to do all of the following: (this is also what it will look like when you visit this webpage)

1. Locate a company in your region.
 2. Examine its history and financial viability.
 3. See if your company is in the news.
 4. Examine the company's webpage.

1. Locating a company in your region. The following databases are sites that will assist you in locating companies in your region or city.

Sorkin's Online This site is available only from the Kansas City Campus. It offers local business directory information for Kansas City, St. Louis, and Chicago. (On Campus only and available in print at public libraries)

Hoover's Online This site allows you to search for companies according to industry and name. (On Campus only or enrolled students can get off-campus instructions for logging in at library.kc.devry.edu and using your DeVry Identification number ex. D0193...)

CorpTech Database is only available on campus. It contains profiles of more than 50,000 manufactures and developers of technology products, including smaller, privately held companies. (On Campus only)

Reference USA Business Database provides detailed information on more than 12 million U.S. businesses. (On Campus only)

2. Examine its history and viability. Researching a company's history, number of employees, and financial information can be a powerful decision making tool.

Hoover's Online This site is designed for investors. It allows investors to research a company's history, number of employees, financial information, main competitors, and other criteria. DeVry University has a subscription to the most detailed information offered through the site. (On Campus only or enrolled students can get off-campus instructions for logging in at library.kc.devry.edu and using your DeVry Identification number ex. D0193...)

Sorkin's Online This site is available only from the Kansas City Campus. It offers local business directory information for Kansas City, St. Louis, and Chicago. This service is similar to Hoover's Online except it provides information on smaller and lesser known companies. (On Campus only)

EDGAR The U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission online database. This site will assist you in determining if the company you are researching is a publicly or privately held.

3. See if your company is in the news. The best way to keep on the rapidly changing world of business and how it has affected the company you are researching is to search through a news database.

EBSCOhost This is a database available only to Kansas City DeVry students. It lists newspaper, magazine, and trade journal articles. These publications are updated daily and contain fast breaking news. (On Campus only)

ProQuest This is a database available only to Kansas City DeVry students. It lists newspaper, magazine, and trade journal articles. These publications are updated daily and contain fast breaking news. (On Campus only or enrolled students can get off-campus instructions for logging in at library.kc.devy.edu and using your DeVry Identification number ex. D0193...)

4. Examine the company's webpage. After discovering if the company is compatible with your goals, examine their website for information on career leads or contact points for job information. Generally, company websites can be found through a major search engine such as the following:

www.dogpile.com
